

Theatrics and real life create perfect storm

The sun streaming through the movie-magic fog and wind made for an atmospheric scene just before cameras rolled.

Neighbors and on-duty police watched the filming on King Caesar Road near the bridge Monday morning.

Former Duxbury Harbormaster Don Beers on movie detail with Town Manager René Read, who stopped by the set on Powder Point Avenue to see how things were going.

A crew sets up a wave machine to simulate a hurricane.

The naturally windy Monday was augmented with wind and fog machines for a scene where cars were evacuating during a hurricane.

Photos by Karen Wong

A long line of cars evacuates for the cameras on the other side of a "fallen tree."

Sandbags around the guard shack in prep for the movie hurricane....just a day before a real Nor'easter blew through town that evening.

Movie equipment in front of a glorious Duxbury beach sunrise.

After a stormy night, Monday morning the skies cleared, and the crew was already at work.

The parking lot next to Blakeman's was filled with equipment trucks and served as basecamp.